POETRY

IN GREEN OLD GARDENS. In green old gardens, hidden away
From sight of revel and sound of strife,
Where a bird may sing out his soul
ere he die.
Nor fears the night, so he lives his day;
Where the high red walls, which are growing gray
With their lichen and moss embroid-

Where even the bee has time to glide
(Gathering, gayly, his honey's store)
Right to the heart of the old-world flowers—
China-asters and purple stocks,
Dahlias and tall red hollyhooks,
Laburnums rainin their gelden
showers.
Columbines prim of the folded core.
And lupuns, and larkspurs, and "London pride."

Blithe as the birds and wise as the bees.

In green old pardens, hidden away
From sight of revel and sound of strife,
Here have I leisure to breathe and move.

And to do my work in a nobler way.
To sing my songs, and to say my say;
To dream my dreams, and to love
my leve;
To hold my faith, and to live my life.
Making the most of its shadowy day.

A DAY IN JUNE.

And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then heaven tries the earth if it be in tune,
And ever it softly her warm ear lays;
Whether we look or whether we listen,
We hear life's murmur or see it gilsten;
Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within it that reaches and towers,
And grasping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers.

No price is set on the lavish summer, June may be had by the poorest come —Lowell
